Especially the traumas. There's just no way to hide from them. I feel like they're coming in waves, or like a hurricane just dropped a ton of water on me. It's hot, it's cold, it's tiring, it's stressful, it's just crazy and I feel like I need to find a way to escape from it. I'm in what's called the "last trimester" (the third one) and already, I've come to learn some great tips to help cope with the outside traumas and stress, and how to stay calm and keep moving forward with life. Since I started reading blogs and journals and tweets about having children and pregnancy, I've heard a lot about sex, masturbation, toys, and toys for pregnancy, etc. so I thought it would be great to just share some of those ideas and thoughts with you guys, along with some recent/current pregnancy revelations. Hopefully, they'll help you all a little bit. So without further ado, here we go: Sex I'm not going to lie, I'm very much a "Passionate" when it comes

Previous studies have demonstrated disparities in the quality of health information resources among consumers. To address the fact that much of health information is available through the Internet, we investigated the availability, perceived usefulness, quality, and health information literacy (HIL) of websites that deliver consumer health information in the United States. The aims of this study were (1) to determine the distribution of consumer health websites by whether they are run by health experts or health information professionals and the perceived importance of their information; (2) to determine the overall quality of consumer health websites; and (3) to identify associations between health
